The line-up for the first team is as follows:

Jump center and captain, Edith Harris, a Junior, from Spout Spring.

Schoolboy Killed On Stonewall Highway When Hit by Auto

"Sudden Death" on the highways struck in Appomattox county yesterday and took the life of an eleven-year old school boy, Albert Eagle, son of Charlie Eagle, of Stonewall. The schoolboy was killed instantly when struck by a careening car on Route 608, at Stonewall, at 3:30 P. M. His body was dragged some distance by the car, which then overturned against a bank. The boy was on his way home from school, and was walking with his sister, Ernestine, 15, and brother, Marshall, 7. The brother and sister escaped injury.

John Henry Turner, Negro, of Stonewall district, was arrested and lodged in the county jail here, charged with being the driver of the car which hit the youth. It is reported that he will be charged with manslaughter, driving while drunk, and driving without a permit. Eugene Turner and Carlisle Johnson, both Negroes, were also arrested and lodged in jail as material witnesses, having been riding in the car. Earl Jennings is said to be the owner of the car and was sitting on the front seat at the time of the accident. He, too, was placed in jail here, and will reportedly be charged with allowing a drunken man without a permit to operate his car. Jennings told the writer this morning that the car was not speeding, but began swaying after passing a curve. State Highway Police Officers J. A. Bingham and L. L. Stanley investigated the accident.

Funeral services for the Eagle boy will be held this afternoon at 3:30 from the Hebron Baptist church.

This Appomattox school boy was the 574th person to be killed thus far during 1939 in automobile accidents in the state of Virginia.

Committee On a. Counties Makes Report

Richmond, Va., Nov. 1 (By VPA) Offering a series of suggestions for curbing what it described as the "rapid breakdown County Government" the Virginia Commission on County Government has drawn up legislative recommendations, including abolition of the fee system. Among the recommendations were proposals for a functional form of county government in lieu of the "Tax County Supervisor Form," and the creation of a Tax Advisory Commission on Local Government, directed by an executive of thorough training and experience in public administration, appointed by the Governor."

Other major recommendations included: relieving circuit judges "of the heavy duties of County Administration," creation of County District Councils in the Judicial Districts to "provide for a formal system of consultation and conference between county officials," a study by the Governor's Advisory Council of the "need for ways and means of creating and providing for metropolitan areas," mandatory organization of health departments for county or by districts of several counties in those which do not have such organizations, a mandatory quintennial general reassessment of all real estate subject to taxation, abolition of the office of constable and transfer of its duties to the sheriff's office, and a change in the method of naming school board members.

Dr. Raymond B. Pinchbeck of the University of Richmond, secretary of the Commission, emphasized that "decentralization," was tending to destroy County Government due "largely to scientific and social changes which have come largely during the depression." The effect of the State eventually takes over the control of schools, and the tendency is in this direction, then, in the opinion of the Commission, the last great function of the counties will be gone, already the roads, welfare, health and police functions have gone largely, if not entirely, into State hands, leaving the schools as the big step to be taken. Consolidation of counties for the performance of governmental functions was also "as necessary, but a forlorn hope."

Be courteous to tourists.

Ready For Big Anti-Rat Drive In Appomattox

The "Anti-Rat Campaign" to be sponsored in Appomattox by the Appomattox Rotarian Club has been tentatively set for next week-end, and a special committee from the Club is working to make the drive a success. The committee met last night, and will present its report to the Club at its regular monthly luncheon next Tuesday night.

The success of any poisoning campaign, especially where Red Squill bait is used ,depends on how and where the bait is distributed. This bait is relatively harmless to domestic animals and so can, without extra hazard, be distributed more freely than othes poison materials.

On home premises the bait should be distributed in late afternoon after chickens and other stock have more or less settled down, so that rats will have first chance at the bait.

Red Squill is slow in action. Thus, with baits freely and abundantly distributed so that all the rats can find some without hunting or fighting for a portion, there is time for all to partake before reactions set in and cause alarm and probable refusal to take the bait on the part of the rats.

With bait in hand, the distributor should first look over the premises, house and other possible harboring places, taking special notice of definite runways and burrows, especially under floors of buildings and feeding platforms. Look for tracks behind rubbish, in plunder rooms, and check up on out houses and vegetable cellars. If the rats play up and down in the walls of the homes, and in attics, try and locate their nearest ground harbors. Rats, like electricity, have to have ground connections. Those that play in walls and attics and out-buildings, come down at night to feed and water.

After the preliminary survey, open all three cans of bait and with a light wooden paddle, or small wooden chip off a piece of bait, about the size of a common marble, from each can in succession, and repeat, as nroverss is made from place to place. Keep in mind that many small baits, well distributed, in places where rats will find them easiest, will have the greatest effect. Rats run on wall beams and other prominent places after they have eaten and so play. So, place most of the bait low down, under floors and in dark corners and along walls, rather than in high and open places or on top of stored vegetables or grains.

The action of Red Squill causes gradual paralysis and so the rats seek burrows in the ground and other hidden places to die. (There is seldom any serious odors, as the rats try to "go home" when they begin to feel sick. Few, if any dead rats will be found in the open. But any carcasses found should be buried or otherwise destroyed. Red Squill will not harm chickens or other fowls, birds, cats or dogs, but if such birds or other animals eat the dead rats, they may also eat maggots or other internal parasites in the rats' bodies and such food will or may cause sickness. When chickens or other domestic fowls eat decaying carcasses of the cause of death of the animal furnishing the meat, sickness may result. Red Squill, however, has nothing whatsoever to do with this sickness.

Before baiting it will pay you to clean up your premises, getting rid of refuse, odds and ends of lumber, trash, boxes etc. And also remove odds and ends from places into which rats can gain easiest access. A good cleaning will make the rats hungrier for the bait. Do this several days before baiting.

Rosser's Mill Destroyed Here by Fire Yesterday Afternoon

The worst fire of the year hit in Appomattox yesterday afternoon, as the mill of the J. M. Rosser Milling Company was completely destroyed by a blaze which originated in its basement engine room. The damages were estimated at upwards of $12,000, and in addition to the mill, and its equipment included nearly 4,000 bushels of wheat.

The flames spread rapidly and enveloped the two-story frame building within a few moments after the fire alarm was sounded at 4 P. M. The Appomattox fire engine and hose was rushed into service, and manned by volunteers succeeded in limiting the fire to the mill. The local high school football team, in uniform, deserted practice on the school grounds, to man one hose at the fire.

Just 100 yards from the mill was the huge storage tanks of the Standard Oil Co., and 25 yards away were the main tracks of the Norfolk and Western railway. Cross ties under the rails smouldered and sparks threatened to catch the store building of the H. C. Babcock Co., and the J. W. Cawthorn store building.

This is the second time the Rosser Mill has burned. Four years ago the mill was struck by lightning and completely razed. It was immediately rebuilt on the same site at that time. Mr. Rosser made no statement this morning as to whether or not he would rebuild. He is an experienced miller and his mill was a valuable asset to Appomattox.

Damage to the building and the machinery was only partly covered by fire insurance, it is understood. Mr. and Mrs. Rosser stated this morning that they wished to extend their deep appreciation to the firefighters, including the school football team, Dr. C. O. O'Brien, G. M. Dean and the scores of others who did everything possible to confine the flames.

Next Tuesday Election Day In Virginia

Richmond, Va. Nov. 1.- (By VPA) As the polls next Tuesday voters will decide contests for 39 seats in the Virginia general assembly, including 9 in the state senate, and 131 county offices. Democratic, Republican nominees mark seven senatorial districts, one of which elects two senators, and in one the Democratic nominee is opposed by an independent incumbent. Where will be contests between Democrats and Republicans in 14 house of delegates races and Independents and Democrats will vie in five instances. In one county five candidates are seeking election to the house as a result of the resignation of the regular nominee, who will become a trial justice. A Socialist is running against six Democratic nominees for the house in Richmond.

The counties will elect their treasurers, commissioners of the revenue, sheriffs and commonwealth's attorneys, and contests are being fought for 131 of these offices. Included in this number are the offices of 42 sheriffs, 31 commonwealth's attorneys, 30 treasurers and 27 commissioners of the revenue.

Few of the contests for assembly seats have developed issues of state wide import, although several are expected to bring out a heavy vote of Democrats and Republicans. Many leaders in both the house and senate have no opposition and the lack of contests for numerous county offices will reduce the balloting in these cases.

ASKS FOR GOOD VOTE

R. L. Burke, county treasurer, today insulted the following statement in regards to next Tuesday's election:

"Voters of Appomattox County, Next Tuesday, November 7th, is general election day.

"All county and district officers, state senator and member of the house of delegates are to be re-elected.

"Old Appomattox County has a fine record for a good vote.

"Let's keep that record.

R. L. Burke."

Presbyterian Mission Study

The ladies of the Womans' Auxiliary of the Presbyterian church met in the home of Misses Lucy and Emma Smith Tuesday evening, when a review of the Home Mission book was made. The official Home Mission study book this year is written by Dr. D. M. Hagaw, and is entitled, "Chapels- fTodayf's Evangelistic Frontier."

Miss Emma Smith, who is secretary of the Assembly's Home Mission, presided over the interesting session. Each member had been requested to bring two questions on the book and these, with discussions on "Chapel Work" or outposts, which is a missio, work of the church, proved interesting and helpful.

After the meeting a social hour was enjoyed, the hostess serving refreshments.

Opportunities in Navy

To man and operate the new planes authorized for the Navy, more than ten thousand new men will be necessary. These will be chosen from the young men enlisting in the U. S. Navy for general service. It has been estimated that it requires ten men in the ground crew to keep one plane in active service. Some of the ratings to be filled by men in the Navy are: Aviation machinest's mates, aviation ordnance men, metalsmiths, carpenters and radiomen. Several hundred enlisted men will also train yearly at Pensacola, Florida, to become Naval Aviation Pilots.

A huge increase in Naval Aviators and Mechanics will occur during the present Naval Expansion to man the 2500 planes to be operated by the United States Navy. Thess will require an Aviation force of some 25,000 men in the Aviation branch. In addition to some 10,000 men to be drawn from regular Navy enlistements.
